Dr. ROBERT ELBEL recently wrote that he has been promoted to Research Professor at the University of Utah and also appointed Research Associate in Entomology at the B. P. Bishop Museum, Honolulu, Hawaii. Although still interested in flea larvae, his current involvement is with bird lice.

INCLUDED in a recent letter from Dr. A. H. Benton was the following announcement which he requested be included in Flea News 26:

A new journal, Advances in Biosciences, was inaugurated with the December 1982 issue. Published by D.A.V. College, Muzzafarnagar, India, the journal seeks manuscripts in any area of modern biology. Manuscripts or queries may be sent to the American representatives on the editorial board, Dr. Norman H. Dill, Dept. of Biology, Delaware State College, Dover, Delaware, USA 19901, or Dr. Allen H. Benton, Dept. of Biology, State University College, Fredonia, New York, USA 14063.

ATTENTION IS CALLED to a newsletter entitled PLAGUE SURVEILLANCE edited by the Plague Branch, Vector-Borne Diseases Division, Center for Disease Control, P.O. Box 2087, Fort Collins, Colorado, USA 80522. Now in volume 4, it is intended to "disseminate current information on plague surveillance and control in the United States". Individual reports summarize human cases, epizootic investigations, control operations, surveillance methodologies, and other items of interest. Already published are Vol. 1(1-6), 1980; Vol. 2(1-4), 1981; Vol. 3(1), 1982; Vol. 4(1 & 2), 1983. To be placed on the mailing list, contact Dr. A. M. Barnes at the above address.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED - Mammalian Biology in South America edited by M. A. Mares and H. H. Genoways, 1982. (ISBN 0-931796-06-7) Contributions at a Symposium held at the Pymatuning Laboratory of Ecology, May 10-14, 1981. Volume 6. Special Publication Series, Pymantuning Laboratory of Ecology, Linesville, PA 16424 USA. 539 pp. U.S. $30.00.

To review each of the 27 contributions published in this attractive volume would be impractical since each deals with a separate subject. The first 10 articles treat the reader to a review of mammalogical research in South America and include reviews of mammalian biology during the last decade, current status of South American mammalogy, and a series of papers on ecology, geography, biogeography, and faunal origins and affinities. All of the remaining papers but the last two deal with such diverse subjects as the biogeography of South

American bats, evolution of marsupials, diversity and adaptation in hystricognath rodents, biology of Neotropical primates and camelids, population biology, physiological ecology, behavioral research, and conservation.

The final two sections are roundtables wherein a number of contributors address the issues of conservation in South American mammals and research priorities in South America. Not surprisingly, the latter statements emphasize education, conservation, and faunal research as being foremost among many priorities. Massive habitat destruction in recent times has brought many species to the brink of extinction, and for some of these the time may have passed when conservation measures would be effective.

While there is no mention of parasites in any of the presentations, the volume as a whole contains a wealth of information about a fascinating part of the world. Of particular value to the pulicologist are the articles dealing with classification and biogeography. The book is printed in an attractive format on high quality paper, is well bound and remarkably free of mechanical flaws. For a publication of this quality the price is astoundingly low. -R.E.L.

CONFERENCE PAPERS

The 10th Scandinavian Symposium for Parasitology was held 19-21 August 1981, in K ge, Denmark. Two papers of interest included:

- Brandt, M. - The control of fleas: Different control programmes concerning fleas on dogs and cats (Ctenocephalides felis and C. canis).
- Christensen, N. D. - The cat flea Ctenocephalides felis: The influence of humidity and temperature on development and survival.

The Entomological Societies of America, Canada, and Ontario met in joint meeting in Toronto November 29-December 3, 1982. Two papers concerning fleas were presented.

- Rymeus, M. G. - Comparisons of rearing conditions, life cycles, and efficacy between Texas, California, and Florida cat fleas.
- Lane, R. S. - Problems associated with ticks, fleas and associated pathogenic agents. [Part of a symposium on arthropods as pests and vectors in parks and other recreational areas.]

The North Central Branch of the Entomological Society of America met March 15-17, 1983, in St. Louis, Missouri. One pertinent paper was presented.

- Sargent J. & C. Courtney - Use of methoprene in early season flea prevention.

At the seventh annual Indiana Vector Control Association conference in Bloomington, Indiana, March 7-8, 1983, the following flea papers were presented:

- Lewis, R. E. - Biology and control of fleas with special reference to the cat flea, Ctenocephalides felis.
- Miller, N. - The flea problem in Indiana: a veterinarian's viewpoint.

IN RECENT YEARS the editors have been in regular contact with Dr. C. A. Hubbard, now retired in Tigard, Oregon. A pioneer in the study of fleas of the western United States, Hubbard went on to work briefly in Iraq and later in Tanzania. During his professional life he published 60 works, most of them dealing with fleas. Among these was his book, Fleas of Western North America, which remains today the only comprehensive treatment of the fauna of western United States. Since Dr. Hubbard is no longer active professionally, it seems appropriate to supply colleagues with a bibliography of his published works. Copies of those indicated by † are still available from Dr. Nixon Wilson, Department of Biology, University of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls, Iowa 50614 USA.
